32 recoverable with adequate backup and recovery processes;

33 (4) Payment of ransoms only encourages further cyberattacks on 34 the same entities;

35 (5) SecurityWeek discovered for entities that pay a ransom in a
36 ransomware cyberattack that at least eighty percent (80%) of those victims

1 are hit with a second ransomware cyberattack;

2 (6) An entity that pays a ransom to ransom holders that are
 3 holding data access hostage is often not successful in regaining data access;
 4 and

5 (7) A study by Statista in 2023 reported that only fifty-two 6 percent (52%) of the victims that paid a ransom received data access back on 7 the first ransom payment and that another forty-one percent (41%) had to pay
 8 a second ransom to regain data access.
