SB 1063: administrative review of agency decisions

Sponsor: Senator Mesnard, LD 17

Caucus & COW

Overview

Requires, if demanded by certain parties, that a trial for review of final administrative decisions of certain state agencies be a trial de novo.

History

A person is permitted to appeal a final administrative decision of a contested case or an appealable agency action in accordance with statute relating to judicial review of administrative decisions. In an action for judicial review of a final administrative decision, jurisdiction is vested with the superior court, unless another venue is expressly prescribed in statute (A.R.S. §§ 41-1092.08 and 12-905).

An affected party in a final administrative decision must file a notice of appeal within 35 days of receiving the decision in order to commence an action to review a final administrative decision. The notice of appeal must contain a statement of the findings and decisions sought to be reviewed (A.R.S. §§ 12-904 and 12-909).

After reviewing the administrative record and supplementing evidence, the court may affirm, reverse, modify or vacate and remand the agency action. The court must affirm the agency action unless the court concludes that the agency action is contrary to law, not supported by substantial evidence, arbitrary and capricious or an abuse of discretion. In proceedings brought by or against a regulated party, the court must decide all questions of law without deference to any previous determination by the agency. For review of final administrative decisions of specified agencies that are exempt from administrative hearing procedures, the trial must be a trial de novo, if: 1) demanded in the notice of appeal or motion of an appellee other than the agency; and 2) a hearing was either not held by the agency or not reported or recorded to maintain a transcript (A.R.S. § 12-910).

A trial de novo is a trial in a higher court in which all the issues of fact or law tried in a lower court are reconsidered as if no previous trial had taken place.
