systems, and grant management;

(d) It is necessary to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of homeland security functions provided by state government; and

(e) Establishing a single entity to manage homeland security duties at the state level will enhance communication among the various levels of government, reduce overlapping efforts, clarify roles and responsibilities, maximize usage of funds, improve customer service, and ultimately strengthen the ability of the state and other actors to provide efficacious homeland security.

(2) The general assembly further finds, determines, and declares that:

(a) Redundancies in planning, training, public risk messaging, and emergency support functions exist between the departments of local affairs and public safety regarding homeland security and emergency management activities;

(b) Emergency management is largely a public safety function and fits well within the department of public safety's mission;

(c) It is possible to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of homeland security functions provided by state government; and

(d) Establishing a single entity to manage homeland security and emergency management duties at the state level will enhance communication among the various governmental entities, reduce overlapping efforts, clarify roles and responsibilities, maximize usage of funds, improve customer service, and ultimately strengthen the ability of the state and other actors to provide efficacious emergency management.

(3) The general assembly also finds and declares that:

(a) Fire prevention and control are public safety functions best addressed by a public safety agency;

emergency management functions within the executive branch;

(c) The Colorado state forest service admirably provides for healthy forests and furthers the mission of Colorado state university;

(d) Transferring wildland fire prevention and suppression operations from Colorado state university to the department of public safety will not diminish the Colorado state forest service's role in providing for healthy forests, nor will it diminish the university's ability to carry out its mission of educating its students;

(e) The division of fire prevention and control has an established relationship with Colorado's fire service; and
