11 A CEREMONIAL RESOLUTION

13
14
15 IN THE COUNCIL OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
16
17

18
19 To celebrate the 46th anniversary of Zenith Gallery and recognize it for its contributions to the 20 District of Columbia and the Greater Washington Metropolitan Area.

21
22 WHEREAS, Ward 4 resident Margery E. Goldberg, founder and director, opened Zenith
23 Gallery on Rhode Island Avenue NW, March 1978 when she was 27 years old;

24
25 WHEREAS, since opening their doors, Zenith continues to represent artists from the 26 Washington Area, national, and international artists;

27
28 WHEREAS, for over 46 years, Ms. Goldberg has been curating public, private, corporate,
29 and institutional collections throughout the Washington D.C. tri-state area and nationally;

30
31 WHEREAS, by pushing boundaries, Zenith Gallery has grown to become one of 32 Washington's foremost and longest running galleries, recognized for its striking mix of high-
33 quality contemporary artworks in all media including paintings, indoor and outdoor sculpture,
34 neon art, tapestries and mixed media and collage art, and photography that stimulate and 35 engage. The gallery services have expanded to include high-quality acquisition, consulting,
36 appraisal, and commissioning services to residential, corporate, and institutional clients
37 including many DC Public Schools;

38
39 WHEREAS, Margery Goldberg received a BA in Fine Arts from George Washington
40 University and studied woodworking, sculpture and silversmithing at the Rochester Institute of 41 Technology where she was later a guest lecturer. Ms. Goldberg arrived in DC in 1968 from 42 Rochester, New York. An art major, dance minor with a heavy dose of social activism. After 43 college, Ms. Goldberg opened a woodworking studio in Georgetown, under the Whitehurst
44 Freeway and produced sculptures, sculptural furniture, and commissioned art;

45
46 WHEREAS, Ms. Goldberg was one of the first woman in America with her own
47 woodworking studio. After a fire left her Hayloft studio in ruins, she opened Zenith Gallery
48 in a complex at 15th and Rhode Island Avenue NW, 50,000 square-foot property that had

49 been the international school of law, 4 townhouses, a large three-story building that housed the 50 Dance Exchange and Studio Theater and a carriage house where Zenith Gallery began which 51 had her woodshop and several artists' studios. The gallery opened in 1978, 10 years after the 52 riots decimated 14th Street. Soon after, 50 artists' studios were added which served as an 53 affordable haven for artists to work, live, show their work and support each other. After the 54 complex was closed in a zoning dispute the Zenith Gallery moved to 413 Seventh Street NW
55 for 24 years and was actively involved in the development and growth of the Penn Quarter
56 downtown business community and the building of the Capital One Arena which was then
57 the MCI Center;

58
59 WHEREAS, In 2009, Zenith Gallery and The Zenith Community Arts Foundation
60 moved to Ms. Goldbergs home in Ward 4, which includes a two-story Gallery Salon, a
61 regular gallery in the lower level, a sculpture garden in front and an inground sculpture
62 garden in her former swimming pool. Zenith continues to host art exhibitions with artists
63 talks for noted and emerging artists at Zenith Gallery in upper northwest Washington;

64
65 WHEREAS, as an accomplished artist, Goldberg has created more than 300 pieces of 66 sculpture, sculptured furniture and neon, now in private and public collections throughout the U.S., 67 Canada and Europe. In addition to showing her work in her own gallery, she has been featured in 68 ten one-women shows in the Mid-Atlantic region and more than 40 group shows in 13 U.S. cities;

69
70 WHEREAS, as a curator, Mrs. Goldberg has launched 450-plus shows for her own gallery
71 as well as traveling exhibitions, multiple Art League shows and more than 100 corporate 72 collections and projects, including major outdoor sculptures;

73
74 WHEREAS, Ms. Goldberg established The Zenith Community Arts Foundation— a
75 Washington DC, non-profit 501C-3 organization in 2000. The Foundation is dedicated to 76 promoting art and fostering alliances between artists, businesses, non-profits, and public sector
77 organizations, using the transformative power of art to benefit the community particularly through
78 public art projects, education;

79
80 WHEREAS, in 2020, ZCAF received a $150,000 grant from events DC to build the 81 nation's capital's first mobile woodshop and a stationary woodshop. The mobile woodshop
82 goes to two schools teaching carpentry skills, math, and employability skills at Ballou Stay in 83 Ward 8 and Luke C. Moore Stay program in Ward 5; and

84
85 WHEREAS, In 2023, ZCAF received another grant from Events DC to create a
86 traveling exhibition about the trees of DC. DC is the Tree capital of the country and along with 87 Casey trees this exhibition will be traveling around DC for the next few years. ZCAF and 88 Casey Trees produced eight arboreal panels, called "The Wonders of DC Trees." These colorful
89 displays dramatize the significance of the urban canopy in the District of Columbia. They have 90 already appeared at the Kennedy Center and will eventually be featured in selected DC public
91 libraries, with a kickoff exhibition at Martin Luther King Library in April 2025.
