7 Conviction of a parent for murder of a child’s other parent. In issuing any judgment or 8 temporary order of visitation or custody, the conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction of 9 the parent of a child for murder in the first or second degree of the child's other parent, or 10 conviction for aiding, abetting, attempting, conspiring or soliciting to commit murder in the first

11 or second degree of the child's other parent, or a comparable crime against the other parent under 12 federal law or the law of any other state, shall create a rebuttable presumption that contact with 13 the child and exercise of parental rights, including but not limited to care and custody of the 14 child, by the convicted parent are not in the child's best interests. This rebuttable presumption 15 may be overcome only if the court determines that:

17 permitting contact between the convicted parent and the child or exercise of parental rights by 18 the convicted parent; or

19 the crime occurred in the context of past physical, sexual or psychological abuse
20 committed by the other parent against the convicted parent as set forth section 23F of chapter 21 233, and contact between the child and convicted parent or award of custody, visitation or other 22 rights to the convicted parent is in the child's best interests. If the court determines that the 24 in support of such a determination. This rebuttable presumption applies whether or not the 25 convicted parent has exhausted any right to appeal the conviction, and notwithstanding any order 26 of a court entered prior to the conviction that awarded the convicted parent custody, visitation or 27 other rights related to the child.

28 Except as authorized and ordered by a court under this section, no person who is a party 29 in any action before the court concerning custody or visitation, shall permit contact with the 30 convicted parent in the presence of the child and no person shall visit, telephone, write to, or 31 otherwise communicate with the convicted parent in the child's presence or deliver messages or 32 other communications between the child and the convicted parent.

38 degree of the child's other parent, or a crime against the other parent under federal law or the law

40 that the crime occurred in the context of past physical, sexual or psychological abuse committed 41 by the other parent against the convicted parent as set forth section 23F of chapter 233; and (b) 42 the child, if competent to signify his assent, has not assented to an order to dispense with the 43 need for consent by the convicted parent to adoption of the child.
