3 Annotated Code of Maryland

5 Preamble

6 WHEREAS, There has been a steady decline in newspaper readership in the 7 past several decades, while at the same time there has been a significant increase in 8 the number of households with access to the Internet; and

9 WHEREAS, Baltimore City, the 23 counties in Maryland, and many 10 municipalities maintain official government Web sites that are accessible to the public 11 24 hours a day; and

12 WHEREAS, Many legal notices published solely in newspapers go unread and 13 unnoticed by the public because casual newspaper readers generally do not read the 14 legal notice section but instead follow local government issues through the Internet; 15 and

16 WHEREAS, Allowing the publication of legal notices on official government 17 Web sites, while still giving the option to receive notice by mail, will make those 18 notices more easily accessible to a greater number of people, thereby promoting 19 increased public participation in government; and

20 WHEREAS, Like the State, many political subdivisions in Maryland will face 21 significant fiscal challenges for fiscal year 2012, including static or declining property 22 tax revenues, a 62% decrease in State aid from fiscal year 2007 levels (back to the 23 appropriate funding levels in 1984), and potentially significant new federal and State 24 mandates; and

25 WHEREAS, Every dollar spent on publishing legal notices in newspapers
26 places further stress on local budgets, and the counties and Baltimore City can save 27 millions annually if they were to publish via the Internet; now, therefore,
