Bill Analysis

SB 325 modifies the timeframe as it relates to the initial court appearance after a person is charged with a crime and held in jail. The measure provides that such a person must be brought to trial within 9 months instead of 1 year. Additionally, the measure provides that the court must hold a review within 3 months, instead of 4 months as provided for in current law, if it determines the defendant's right to a speedy trial was violated. If the case is still pending after the 3-month period, the court must conduct another review as soon as soon as practicable. The measure directs the court to consider the whether a court reporter was available as well as whether a continuance is granted to allow the prosecution additional time to prepare in a felony case if the court enters specific findings that additional time is justified due to exceptional circumstances if a delay occurred.

House Amendments

HA's to SB 325 removes language providing for no more than 3 continuances to be granted lasting no more than 30 days.
