Whereas one-third of all community and technical college students identify as first-generation;

Whereas one-third of all community and technical college students identify as first-generation, with 12.7 percent having attained an associate's degree and 11.9 percent having attained a certificate from a community or technical college;

Whereas first-generation students navigate multiple competing priorities, and 66 percent were employed while in college, in paid jobs, internships, or work study;

Whereas first-generation students hold significant roles within their household, with 30 percent having dependents to care for while in school;

Whereas 45 percent of first-generation graduates expect to attain a master's degree, and 19 percent expect to attain a doctoral degree upon completing a bachelor's degree;

Whereas the Council for Opportunity in Education and the Center for First-generation Student Success jointly launched the inaugural First-Generation College Celebration in 2017; and
