A BILL

To amend section 230 of the Communications Act of 1934 to correct shortcomings in how that section addresses content moderation, content creation and development, and content distribution.

1       Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2       tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3       SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4       This Act may be cited as the “Disincentivizing Inter-
5       net Service Censorship of Online Users and Restrictions
6       on Speech and Expression Act” or the “DISCOURSE 7       Act”.

1   SEC. 2. CONTENT MODERATION, CREATION AND DEVELOP-
2                 MENT, AND DISTRIBUTION.

3                 (a) TREATMENT AS PUBLISHER OR SPEAKER CON-
4                 TINGENT ON CONTENT MANAGEMENT PRACTICES.—Sec-
5                 tion 230 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C.
6                 230) is amended—

7                         (1) in subsection (c)(1)—
8                                 (A) by striking “No provider” and insert-9                                 ing the following:

10                                 “(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), no provider”; and

11                                 (B) by adding at the end the following:

12                                 “(B) NOTIFICATION OF PARENTAL CON-13                                 TROL PROTECTIONS.—Subparagraph (A) shall 14                                 not apply to a provider of an interactive com-15                                 puter service with a dominant market share 16                                 that violates subsection (d).”; and 17                         (2) in subsection (f)—

18                                 (A) in paragraph (3)—

19   (i) by striking “The term” and insert-
20   ing the following:

21                                 “(A) IN GENERAL.—The term”; and 22   (ii) by adding at the end the fol-

23   lowing:

1                 “(B) CONTENT MODERATION.—If an inter-
2                 active computer service provider with a domi-
3                 nant market share—

4                         “(i) engages in a content moderation
5                 activity that reasonably appears to express,
6                 promote, or suppress a discernible view-
7                 point for a reason that is not protected 8                 from liability under subsection (c)(2), in-9                 cluding reducing or eliminating the ability 10                 of an information content provider to earn 11                 revenue, with respect to any information,
12                 the interactive computer service provider
13                 shall be deemed to be an information con-
14                 tent provider with respect to that informa-15                 tion; or

16                         “(ii) engages in a pattern or practice
17                 of content moderation activity that reason-
18                 ably appears to express, promote, or sup-19                 press a discernible viewpoint for a reason 20                 that is not protected from liability under 21                 subsection (c)(2), including reducing or 22                 eliminating the ability of an information
23                 content provider to earn revenue, the inter-24                 active computer service provider shall be 25                 deemed to be an information content pro-

1           vider with respect to all information that is 2           provided through the interactive computer 3           service.

4           “(C) USE OF TARGETED ALGORITHMIC AM-
5           PLIFICATION.—

6                 “(i) IN GENERAL.—If an interactive 7           computer service provider with a dominant 8           market share—

9                 “(I) amplifies information pro-10           vided by an information content pro-
11           vider by using an algorithm or other 12           automated computer process to target 13           the information directly to users with-14           out the request of the sending or re-
15           ceiving user, the interactive computer 16           service provider shall be deemed to be 17           an information content provider with 18           respect to that information; or

19                 “(II) engages in a pattern or 20           practice of amplifying information
21           provided by an information content 22           provider by using an algorithm or 23           other automated computer process to 24           target the information directly to 25           users without the request of the send-

1                         ing or receiving user, the interactive 2                         computer service provider shall be 3                         deemed to be an information content
4                         provider with respect to all informa-5                         tion that is provided through the 6                         interactive computer service.

7                         “(ii) EXCEPTIONS.—Clause (i) shall 8                         not apply to the use of an algorithm or 9                         other computer process to—

10                         “(I) amplify or target directly to 11                         a user any information that is the re-12                         sult of a search function performed by 13                         the user; or

14                         “(II) sort data chronologically or 15                         alphabetically.

16                         “(D) INFORMATION CREATION OR DEVEL-
17                         OPMENT.—If an interactive computer service
18                         provider with a dominant market share—

19                         “(i) solicits, comments upon, funds, or 20                         affirmatively and substantively contributes 21                         to, modifies, or alters information provided 22                         by an information content provider, the 23                         interactive computer service provider shall 24                         be deemed to be an information content

1 provider with respect to that information;

2 or

3 “(ii) engages in a pattern or practice
4 of soliciting, commenting upon, funding, or 5 affirmatively and substantively contrib-
6 uting to, modifying, or altering information
7 provided by an information content pro-
8 vider, the interactive computer service pro-
9 vider shall be deemed to be an information
10 content provider with respect to all infor-
11 mation that is provided through the inter-12 active computer service.”; and

13 (B) by adding at the end the following:

14 “(5) CONTENT MODERATION ACTIVITY.—The 15 term ‘content moderation activity’ means editing, de-16 leting, throttling, limiting the reach of, reducing or 17 eliminating the ability of an information content pro-18 vider to earn revenue from, or commenting upon, in-19 formation provided by an information content pro-20 vider, or terminating or limiting an account or 21 usership, if the activity is based on content-based 22 criteria.

23 “(6) PATTERN OR PRACTICE.—The term ‘pat-
24 tern or practice’ means any formal or informal pol-
25 icy or rule, whether created by a human or gen-

1       erated by a computer, as applied or used by an 2       interactive computer service provider.”.

3           (b) CLARIFYING CATEGORIES OF OBJECTIONABLE
4 MATERIAL.—Section 230(c)(2) of the Communications
5 Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 230(c)(2)) is amended—

6               (1) in subparagraph (A)—

7                   (A) by striking “considers to be” and in-8                   serting “has an objectively reasonable belief is”;

9                   (B) by inserting “promoting terrorism or 10                  violent extremism,” after “violent,”; and 11                   (C) by striking “or otherwise objection-12                  able” and inserting “promoting self-harm, or 13                  unlawful”; and 14               (2) in subparagraph (B), by striking “para-15                  graph (1)” and inserting “subparagraph (A)”.

16           (c) RELIGIOUS LIBERTY EXCEPTION TO CIVIL LI-
17 ABILITY PROTECTIONS.—Section 230(c)(2) of the Com-
18 munications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 230(c)(2)), as amend-19 ed by subsection (b), is amended—

20               (1) by redesignating subparagraphs (A) and 21                  (B) as clauses (i) and (ii), respectively, and adjust-22                  ing the margins accordingly;

23               (2) by striking “No provider” and inserting the 24                  following:

1                 “(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in 2                 subparagraph (B), no provider”;

3                 (3) in subparagraph (A)(ii), as so designated,
4         by striking “subparagraph (A)” and inserting 5         “clause (i)”;

6                 (4) by adding at the end the following:

7                 “(B) RELIGIOUS LIBERTY EXCEPTION.—
8                 Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any action
9         taken with respect to religious material in a 10         manner that burdens the exercise of religion, as 11         defined in section 5 of the Religious Freedom
12         Restoration Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 2000bb 13         –2).”.

14                 (d) DISCLOSURE OF CONTENT MANAGEMENT MECH-
15 ANISMS AND PRACTICES.—Section 230(d) of the Commu-
16 nications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 230(d)) is amended—17                 (1) by striking “A provider” and inserting the 18         following:

19                 “(1) PARENTAL CONTROL PROTECTIONS.—A 20         provider”;

21                 (2) by adding at the end the following:

22                 “(2) DISCLOSURE OF CONTENT MANAGEMENT
23         MECHANISMS AND PRACTICES.—

24                 “(A) IN GENERAL.—A provider of an 25         interactive computer service that provides the

1           service through a mass-market offering to the 2           public shall publicly disclose accurate informa-
3           tion regarding the content moderation activity
4           of the service, including editing, deleting, throt-
5           tling, limiting the reach of, reducing or elimi-
6           nating the ability of an information content 7           provider to earn revenue from, or commenting 8           upon, information provided by an information
9           content provider, terminating or limiting an ac-
10          count or usership, and any other content mod-11          eration, promotion, and other curation prac-12          tices, sufficient to enable—

13                 “(i) consumers to make informed 14                 choices regarding the purchase and use of 15                 the service; and 16                 “(ii) entrepreneurs and other small 17                 businesses to develop, market, and main-18                 tain offerings by means of the service.

19                 “(B) MANNER OF DISCLOSURE.—A pro-20                 vider of an interactive computer service shall 21                 make the disclosure under subparagraph (A)—

22                 “(i) through a publicly available, eas-23                 ily accessible website; or

24                 “(ii) by submitting the information 25                 described in that subparagraph to the

1                   Commission, which shall make the information
2                   available to the public through the website of the Commission.”.

4                 (e) CLARIFYING THAT IMMUNITY IS AN AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.—Section 230(c)(1) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 230(c)(1)), as amended by subsection (a)(1), is amended—

8                   (1) in subparagraph (A), as so designated, by striking “subparagraph (B)” and inserting “subparagraphs (B) and (C)”; and

11                  (2) by adding at the end the following:

12                 “(C) AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.—In a criminal or civil action against a provider or user of an interactive computer service that treats the provider or user as the publisher or speaker of any information, the provider or user shall bear the burden of proving that the provider or user is not an information content provider with respect to that information for purposes of subparagraph (A).”.
