Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Current law provides that a sentencing court may order a criminal defendant to pay certain costs, including the costs of a law enforcement agency withdrawing a defendant's blood in certain cases when intoxication is an element of the offense. This bill provides that a sentencing court may order a criminal defendant to pay a law enforcement agency's costs of administration of naloxone or another opioid antagonist to a defendant if the defendant was undergoing or was believed to be undergoing an opioid-related drug overdose during the course of the investigation that resulted in the conviction.

For further information see the local fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
